

Retroperitoneal Infrarenal Ectopic Pancreas - An Autopsy Case

Saroj Bolde, D.N. Lanjewar, Sarang Waghmare, Shweta Dhage, Sanjay Bijwe

Dr. Sarang Waghmare, Resident, Department of Pathology, Grant Government Medical College and Sir JJ Hospital, Byculla Mumbai – 400008.

Abstract

Ectopic pancreas is pancreatic tissue lacking anatomical and vascular continuity with the normally located pancreas. Ectopic pancreas is relatively uncommon and usually occurs in the stomach or duodenum. We report the case of a 55-year-old female with retroperitoneal infrarenal ectopic pancreas incidentally. Retroperitoneal and Infra-renal ectopic pancreas has not previously been documented.